JACK JOHNSON HISSED.

Hostile Demonstration at Railway Station.

The change in the pugilist Jack Johnson's fortune was illustrated at Chicago, on May 8, when a crowd at the Union Pacific Railroad station hissed him as he passed through en route to the court for the adjourned hearing of the charge against him under the "White Slavery" laws. The black fighter was dressed in a modest suit of blue, without the profusion of diamonds he wore when the case began, somebody evidently having given him a hint that such a display was inadvisable in the circumstances.

At the beginning of the hearing the proprietress of a resort at Pittsburg testified her dismissal of Belle Schreiber—a white slave—in the present case from her house. The Government had hoped to show that this action was due to Schreiber's association with Johnson; but the court sustained an objection of the defense to this line of examination. Belle Schreiber, a slight and rather pretty brunette, testified that she first met the accused when she was an inmate of one of the most notorious resorts in Chicago. The Government Attorney attempted to secure details, but the judge ruled that inasmuch as the witness's relations with Johnson were admitted he would refrain from polluting the ears of the jury with a recital of them. It will be remembered that subsequently Johnson was found guilty and sentenced to suffer imprisonment for a year and a day.

A WOMAN MAGISTRATE.

Miss Emily Dugan, chairman of the West Ham Board of Guardians, has been specially permitted by the Lord Chancellor to act as a Justice of the Peace in lunacy matters at the workhouse infirmary. Miss Dugan, it is stated, is the first woman who has been allowed to officiate in this capacity.

An application for the purpose was made by the West Ham Guardians to the Lord Chancellor, who, in a former case of a similar kind at Bethnal Green some years ago, directed that the ex-chairman of the board should perform this function when the chairman happened to be a woman.

BEAUTY RECIPES.

Advertising Methods.

LADIES' RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Select Committee of the House of Commons investigating the present state of the law in regard to the sale and advertisement of patent medicines recently had before them Mr. S. E. Ely, secretary, and manager of Messrs. Dearborn (Ltd.), described as proprietors of manufacturers, who have advertised largely in the form of "articles" under titles such as "Novel Beauty Recipes."

The Chairman (Sir E. Norman) said the attention of the Committee had been called to a series of advertisements in popular magazines of medical preparations and drugs, which were stated to have been recommended by a number of ladies, the recommendations being sometimes given with reference to repeated requests in an answer correspondence. He asked witness whether he was prepared to answer questions about these advertisements.

Witness said he was afraid he could not. The managing director said to the advertisements, and he (witness) knew nothing about them. Mr. James G. Daniels, the sole director, was now in America.

Sir P. Magnus: A limited company with one director only?—Yes.

Witness, in reply to Mr. Newton, said the authorized capital of the company was £25,000.

Mr. J. W. Paken, one of the firm of Stevens, Son, and Parkes, solicitor, who was seated in the public part of the Committee-room, asked if he might say that this was a small private company formed by Mr. Daniels in January, 1912, and in his absence Mr. Ely was placed in rather an awkward position.

The chairman read out the following names which had appeared in the advertisements in question:—Mlle. Florence Gauthier, Mlle. Marcelle Dupuis, Mlle. Marie, Mlle. Agnes Dupuis, Mlle. Maquette Poirier, and Mlle. Lucie Robert. He asked witness whether he had knowledge as to whether those persons existed or not.

Witness: None whatever.
The room having been cleared for a few minutes, the Committee afterwards called Mr. Parkes, who said he prepared the memorandum and articles of association on the formation of the company. As to the affairs of the company from a business point of view, he knew absolutely nothing. The memorandum was signed Mr. J. G. Daniels and Mr. Sidney Fowler. When the company was formed 602 21 shares were issued—501 to Mr. Daniels and one to Mr. Fowler, who was Mr. Daniels's first secretary. The offices of the company were in Theobald's-road, but he had never been in them.

In answer to Mr. C. Bathurst, witness said he had no knowledge of the advertisement in question, but some little time ago Mr. Daniels had been in his office, without any breach of professional confidence, he might say that since then the advertisements had not appeared in the form of answers to correspondents.

PRIVATE LETTERS.
Mr. Ely was again examined, and in reply to the chairman said their goods were manufactured for them by qualified chemists according to formulae. He knew nothing about the ingredients.

Again pressed as to whether he had any knowledge of the existence or non-existence of the various ladies mentioned in the advertisements, witness maintained that he had no knowledge.
Asked if he could produce any letters from the ladies whose names had been mentioned, witness said, "Of course I cannot do so. They are private."

The Chairman: I don't think you realize the powers of this Committee. We do not wish to take strong steps, but we could call upon you at once to produce the letters.
Witness: You can decide what you want and call for it, and then we will decide whether you can have it. (Laughter.)
The Chairman: I want to warn you. I can quite understand that you wish to defend yourself as far as possible in the interest of your firm, but you would be very unwise if you were led into disrespect to this Committee. We desire to know whether these various ladies have a real existence, or are only imaginary persons for advertising purposes.

Witness said the letters in question were six months old, and related to advertisements which had since stopped. There had been letters at the office, but where they came from he did not know, and they had not passed through his hands. They were still at the office, and presumably his charge, unless he regarded them as private letters of Mr. Daniel.

Sir P. Magnus: Letters of that kind cannot be private.

The Chairman: You can point to no fact which would lead you to think these ladies had a real existence?

Witness said that at the time the letters were running he had an idea that Mr. Daniel was an actual person.
On what did you base the idea?—Various things one notices in the course of business.
Can you give us one instance?—I cannot give you any specific instance.

A SUBJECTIVE EXISTENCE.

Mr. Lawson: She had a subjective, and not an objective, existence? (Laughter.)—You can put it that way if you like.

The Chairman: To be perfectly frank, do you believe these ladies were used for advertising purposes? I don't think I should express a personal opinion.

The Chairman: I sympathize with you in being called upon to answer these questions without the opportunity of consulting your employer. I hope he will think you have done your best in his interest. (Laughter.)

Answering further questions, Mr. Ely said a dividend had been paid, but "you must not ask me how much." (Laughter.) Their goods were made by Messrs. Parkes, Davis, and Co.

Mr. Lawson asked whether the "reader" form of advertisement was looked upon as a literary contribution to the magazine.

Witness: Oh, dear, no. This was not intended to be regarded as editorial. The scale for such advertisements was higher than for ordinary advertisements.

In reply to Mr. C. Bathurst, he said the average charge was £15 per page. They appeared in ten or eleven magazines a month, and had been doing so ever since they started. It paid them, or they would not continue it.

Mr. Bathurst: How often do your directors meet? There is one director, and he meets himself. (Laughter.)

This concluded the examination of the witness, and the Committee adjourned.

FATHER VAUGHAN IN AMERICA.

AMERICAN ENCOUNTERS.

At a lecture at Queen's Hall last week on "What I saw and said in the United States," Father Bernard Vaughan informed a large audience that his recent trip extended over a distance of 30,000 miles. Incidentally he had been in a train wreck, and was almost shipwrecked.

Upon the latter occasion the ladies rushed to him and asked if he thought they would be saved. "That," he replied, "depends upon yourselves, but I have the best authority for saying that the way is as short to Heaven by water as by land." (New York, Father Vaughan proceeded, as a New York much longer, "he returned," you will have to meet me with a perambulator."

Father Vaughan said that he had occasion to preach at the Catholic Cathedral in New York. When he arrived the place was already full, and a large crowd had assembled outside. "Greeting," he said, "towards the bar," he was informed that there was no standing room except in the pulpit. "Well, I'll take the pulpit," replied Father Vaughan. At that moment he was recognized by some of the officials, and was escorted to the pulpit. The Bishop pointed to the cathedral and place, and asked him how he "liked it." "I said it was all right," said the Bishop, "the cathedral and the place were right here on the west side. I did not like the location, so I wheeled the whole thing back." This was one of the many instances of house-moving which Father Vaughan became engrossed in, and on one occasion he sat at sea while the house itself was being shifted to the next street.

Philadelphia had the reputation of being so slow that one of the cities was brought up to court upon the charge of "growing scarlet pumice." At Baltimore, the centre of a great canning industry, their axiom of life was: "We do it, what we can, and what we can't we eat." At St. Louis an American said to him: "Look at our Hudson and Mississippi Rivers! Why, compared with our rivers, your Me and Severn and Thames are sleepy, sickly streams." "I think your two rivers are 'sickly streams,'" replied Father Vaughan. "I presume it is confined to its bed."

A "SEVEN SISTERS" BET.
A humorist who saw "The Seven Sisters" at the Savoy Theatre (says "the Daily Sketch"), made a bet of a fiver that he would find a family of seven sisters in the Seven Sisters-road and take them to see the play.

SUFFERERS FROM

Skin & Blood Diseases

Such as Eczema, Scrofula, Scabby, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Boils, Pimples, Sores, Eruptions, Piles, Blood Poison, Rheumatism, Gout, &c., should at once realize that outward application, such as lotions, ointments, so-called balms, &c., though they may give relief for the time being, DO NOT CURE. The trouble lies deeper—in the blood. These complaints are the result of clogging impurities in the blood—and so can be permanently cured only by thoroughly purifying the blood.

CAN BE CURED

ONLY BY PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

For cleansing the blood of all impurities, from whatever cause arising, there is no other medicine just as good as Clarke's Blood Mixture—that's why in thousands of cases of skin and blood diseases it has effected remarkable cures where all other treatments have failed.

"Clarke's Blood Mixture is entirely free from any poison of medicine, purgative, laxative, or anything injurious to the system, and is a good, safe, and useful medicine."
Sold by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

A Stimulant as Satisfactory as Alcohol.

O.T.

O.T. is the long-wanted happy medium between a "hard" and a "soft" drink. It compares with spirituous liquors in its stimulating qualities, its satisfying body and its pleasant bite—but it is free from alcohol, and is without intoxicating or other undesirable effects. O.T. is a beneficial drink for ladies when needing a stimulant owing to its warming and comforting properties. No home should be without a bottle.

A Liqueur—Stomachic—Pick-me-up.

Made from natural fruits and herbs O.T. is a pure and healthful beverage, and only favourable effects follow its use. After over-indulgence there's no better "pick-me-up." As a tonic when you feel "out-of-sorts," there's nothing better to make you fit and well again.

As a stomachic, it has wonderful virtues for colic, dysentery, and other stomach troubles. No drink is more suitable than O.T. for both abstainers and non-abstainers; none is more healthful for young and old.

ously told, a policy so delightful to hundreds of thousands of women who claim the franchise that they are subscribing hard cash in great sums to promote the accomplishment of such deeds on a still more wholesale scale. That this is true cannot be for a moment believed. The suffragettes are a stage army, and they deal, to a large extent, in stage money. That they once had some very wealthy people among their subscribers is an undoubted fact, but the latter developments of the campaign have led to the secession of one after another of the richer supporters. That is only natural. Men and women of substance, whatever their views, have to recognize that a system based on house-burning must by its nature prove detrimental to the interests of the property-owning class in the long run. Grievances there are in plenty in an imperfect world, and if every class with a grievance adopted the tactics of the suffragettes there would be a definite farewell to all security of property. It is not surprising, therefore, that one by one the comparatively mild- and rich-suffragettes have quietly severed their connection with the organization, which is now in the hands of a very violent knot of people of a distinctly lower social status. That they have money in some amount can be well believed. But it is no very considerable sum—probably it does not exceed £20,000—and it is rapidly being exhausted in wages of seditious rowdiness and the expenses of a large establishment. Nor is the future more cheerful. The militants are faced with a chill prospect of waning enthusiasm and a decreasing flow of cash. They are reduced to making statements, as to the condition of their funds, which will not bear examination. It was, for example, stated that the recent Albert Hall meeting yielded £15,000; but the actual cash, it is believed, amounts to a little over £800. The glamour of the movement in short, is spent. A year or two ago it was considered rather "smart" to be "militant." Women of a certain distinction in social and literary circles thirsted for the fierce light which beats on Bow-street, and foolish girls of the suburban class looked forward to meeting, in the secret enclaves of the conspirators, people whose names were known in a greater world. But now militancy has rather gone out of fashion. It has become a little middle-class, frumpish, almost provincial. A pretty girl selling a suffragette paper, at one time a not uncommon street spectacle, is now a rarity. The reign of uncontrolled vulgarity has, in short, driven out most of the enthusiasts who were not hopelessly vulgar, and the residue are, generally speaking, of a class perfectly fitted to do the rough criminal work, but valuable neither as leaders nor financial supporters.

A good test of the strength of any movement is the circulation of the newspaper which specially represents its interests and aspirations. It has been stated, on what seems good authority, that the actual sale of "The Suffragette" has declined from 17,000 weekly to 7,500. Thousands of copies were circulated to M.P.s and others, says the writer of an article in the "Standard," but the number of people willing to pay a penny for the journal did not exceed the population of an ordinary market town. Now there are about eight million adult women in the United Kingdom who would be entitled to a vote under adult suffrage. If one in a hundred of this multitude were, as the militants claim, warmly enthusiastic for letter-spoiling, window-breaking, and arson, the circulation of the one paper which devoted itself to such projects would be some ten times greater than it actually is. "The Suffragette" has no fierce competition to meet in its own line; it is quite self-generated. If the utmost zeal of its supporters fails to get more readers there must be some very substantial reason behind the fact. The reason is simply this: that the militants are an altogether insignificant though noisy fraction of the general body of suffragists. They are full of bounce and bluster, and they have a faculty for keeping themselves in the public eye. But they have no real influence, and even the methods of impudence that they have brought to a fine art are now falling from them.

THE CIRCUS.

BENEFIT TO COL. BOB LOVE.

A complimentary benefit was given at the circus at Canoway Bay last night to "Colonel" Bob Love, the veteran showman. There was only a fair attendance in spite of the fact that a special programme had been arranged. In addition to the circus company, Miss Nora Moore, from the Victoria Theatre, afforded considerable pleasure by singing the Waltz song by "The Pink Lady," and also "On Mobile Bay" as an encore. Miss Moore has a fine voice, and she had no difficulty in "filling" the spacious circus hall, her enunciation being distinct and clear. A good exhibition of weight-lifting was given by Private Gilbert Moyle. Some amusing clowning business was gone through by Mariani, Nini, and Roma, whose tomfoolery caused many rounds of hearty laughter. The specialty turns included a six-horse entry by three ladies and three gentlemen, a trick pony introduced by Miss Earnest, a "Wild West" performance by Young Buckshot and Company, and a company of clowns. Towards the conclusion of the entertainment Colonel Bob Love entered the arena and retired thanks to those who had given their patronage to his "benefit," and in response to calls from many sides, the Colonel sang a song with a rollicking lil.

SPORTING.

Billiards.

The semi-final of the Volunteer Challenge Cup between 83rd Coy., R.G.A., and Staff and Departmentals was resumed at the Soldiers' Club last night, the Staff team holding a lead of 66 points.

The first game was between Serjt. Bennett, 83rd Coy., R.G.A., and Staff Serjt. Coy. Staff and Departmentals. Coy was quickly to business, scoring 30 to Bennett's 14, and 100 to 64. Bennett was unfortunate, the balls running unkindly for him but he reached his hundred only 18 in arrears. Coy, however, maintained a lead to the end when he was the winner by 26 points. Breaks, Coy, 14, 11, 10; Bennett, 17, 13, 10. Scores—Staff Serjt. Coy., 200; Serjt. Bennett, 174.

Two excellent exponents of the game were the next pair; Serjt. Erwood, 83rd Coy., R.G.A., and Staff Serjt. Foster, Staff and Departmentals. For some time the game was even, Foster leading 60-41, but Erwood led at 66 for the first time, and at 100 was 12 in front of his opponent. Thereafter he was level at 115, a six break of 20 by Erwood taking him to the front, and with his score at 181 he looked like running to this point but after scoring 18 he failed at an easy red laser. Foster made a few more points before Erwood made the two necessary for him to win the game by 27 points. Breaks, Erwood, 20, 1, 18, 16; Foster, 10, 16, 12, 11. Scores—Serjt. Erwood, 200; Staff Serjt. Foster, 173.

The last game was entered upon with the Staff and Departmentals leading by 93 points, so that the Rev. Foster, Serjt. O. T., Staff and Departmentals required 138 to win the match for his side; his opponent, Bombr. Colmer, 83rd Coy., R.G.A., therefore having a stiff proposition. Play up to the first hundred was even, Colmer leading 10-39 and 100-94. This did not look much like winning but after both being in the 100-120 street, a transformation occurred, Colmer scoring rapidly and Rev. Foster falling away completely. Colmer scored his last 100 while his opponent made 20, and scored a splendid win by 51 points. Breaks, Bombr. Colmer, 22, 13, 11, 10. Rev. Foster, Nil. Scores—Bombr. Colmer, 200; Rev. Foster, 120.

Each team won four of the eight games played, the 83rd Coy., R.G.A. winning the match by the narrow margin of 15 points, the final scores being—83rd Coy., R.G.A., 1405.
Staff and Departmentals 1488.

The 83rd Coy., R.G.A., now engage the Royal Engineers (A) in the final.
Osborne and Albert Cottages, at East Cowes, Isle of Wight, the property of Princess Henry of Battenberg, have been purchased by Mr. Richard Burbridge, the managing director of Messrs. Harcourt. Mr. Burbridge's new estate comprises about twenty-four acres, including fourteen acres of park lands.

BARRISTER REPRIMANDED.

Incident in the Supreme Court.

At a sitting of the Full Court of Appeal this morning held for the purpose of delivering a reserved judgment upon a motion made on behalf of Mr. G. K. Hall Brutton, gentleman and solicitor of the Supreme Court, there was a passage of words between the Chief Justice, Sir William Ross Davies, K.C., and Mr. M. W. Slade, K.C., who represented the appellant in the action. Mr. Slade was reprimanded for impugning a statement his Lordship had made, the Judge informing him that he had not only impugned his word over and over again, but had done so most offensively.

The motion, it will be remembered, took the form of an appeal against an order made by the Court relating to the taxation of certain bills of costs and fees delivered by appellant to the respondent, Leung Shin Kong, whom appellant represented in a big law suit brought against him by the Imperial Bank of China.

Mr. Slade, instructed by Mr. J. S. Harston, of Messrs. Deacon, Looker, Deacon and Harston, appeared for the appellant; and Mr. C. G. Alabaster, instructed by Mr. Roder Harris, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, for the respondents.

Mr. Justice Kump, Puisne Judge, read the written judgment by Sir Haviland de Saussure, Chief Justice of H.B.M. Supreme Court in China, who presided at the sitting of the Full Court of Appeal. In the course of it his Lordship said there was no reason why a solicitor should not send in a bill conditionally so as to prevent a right in the client to have that bill taxed and if Mr. Brutton had clearly indicated that this was an offer by way of settlement no doubt he could have claimed to deliver a further bill. But as he had been pointed out in all the cases quoted the provisions as to the right to tax delivered bills were for the protection of the client in view of the advantage given by the solicitor by his skilled knowledge. If the solicitor was going to claim such a right as was claimed here he must be very careful to preserve that right. This Mr. Brutton had not done. He had accordingly no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the solicitor's bill was delivered and delivered unconditionally. Once a bill was so delivered it was, he thought, quite clear, on the cases that had been cited, that the client was entitled to have the bill taxed, unless it was out of time, and then if there were special circumstances, the judge could order taxation. Such an order had been made, and as he thought rightly made, the appeal ought to be dismissed.

Their Lordships the Chief Justice and Puisne Judge both delivered judgments concurring in the presiding judge's opinion and an order was made accordingly against the appellant, with costs.

Mr. Slade asked their Lordships to make an explicit order that the costs already taxed should not be taxed again. In the course of a rather lengthy submission he contended that he had been successful on this appeal, and then proceeded to refer to something which had taken place in Chambers.

The Chief Justice said it was not as Mr. Slade had said. Mr. Slade was not present in Chambers; he was, and heard the whole thing in Chambers.

Mr. Slade: Then, my Lord, may I suggest that your Lordship's memory is at fault?

The Chief Justice: We have given our judgment, and I am not inclined to allow you to supersede the judgment we have given.

Mr. Slade: May I read your Lordship's notes?

Mr. Slade was proceeding to do this when—

The Chief Justice said: I will not allow you to over and over again impugn what I have said.

Mr. Slade: I did not wish to impugn what your Lordship said, but—

The Chief Justice: You have done so, and done it over and over again most offensively. You cannot always be right. None of us can always be right.

Mr. Slade: May I be permitted to suggest without any offence that perhaps in this case your Lordship's memory is playing you false, May I?

The Chief Justice: I will hear you on Monday. We have given our judgment. If there is any question as to the form the order should take I will hear you in Chambers.

About £1,000,000 is involved.

RUSSIA IN MONGOLIA.

Since the conclusion of the Convention between Russia and Mongolia at Urga on November 3, 1912 by which Russia recognized the autonomy of Mongolia, considerable interest has been shown in the development of the situation. China at that time was unable to voice an effective protest although the Chinese Government never acquiesced in the arrangement made by Russia and Mongolia. Recently, however, negotiations have been carried on between China and Russia with the view of arriving at some sort of modus vivendi in regard to Mongolia. China was of course anxious to "save face" to the greatest possible extent, and there seems to be reason to suppose that Russia was willing, without really abandoning her privileged position in Mongolia, to permit China to retain a shadow of her former suzerainty over Mongolia.

The Chinese Parliament, however, has not hailed this agreement with undue enthusiasm and has expressed a strong desire to secure the modification of some of the articles. Regarded from a disinterested, but sympathetic, view point, China seems to have been conceded by Russia quite as much as she could reasonably expect.

A series of articles in the May Number of the "Far Eastern Review" gives a good deal of interesting information in regard to the political and economic situation in Mongolia, and the diplomatic instruments relating to the new-born "Mongolian Empire" are also published. These articles can be read with advantage by those who desire to obtain an accurate understanding of the present position in regard to China's North-east "dependency."

SCOTTISH SPORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

EDINBURGH, May 27.

Ayr gave their usual consistent display in the Union match against Perthshire, and strengthened their position on the table by winning somewhat easily. At Kilmarnock, the home team were outplayed in all departments by Fife, who recorded their first success in the competition, just getting home, however, two minutes from time.

The first century recorded in the Edinburgh district went to G. A. Turton, of Loretto, and Loretto, it may be said, looks like taking a prominent part in the Schools Championship.

OPIMUM BURNING IN CHEFOO.

Eight chests of opium were publicly burned recently in Chefoo, by order of the Chinese authorities. A letter just received from Dr. Hermer Corbett of that city says: "I have had the pleasure of seeing eight chests of opium burned here. An attempt was being made to smuggle it on a vessel entering this port, but it was discovered and ordered to be burned."
